Michael Kroth has been studying passionate work since 1999. His book, Transforming Work: The Five Keys to Achieving Trust, Commitment, and Passion in the Workplace, co-authored with Dr. Patricia Boverie, is about the indispensable necessity of passion for personal organizational, and leadership success.

Michael is an Assistant Professor at the University of Idaho in Adult and Organizational Learning, and has developed and administered corporate-level leadership development and succession planning programs, been the administrator of a corporate foundation, and served as a director of corporate community affairs.

He presents regularly at national and international conferences, and consults with utility, non-profit, healthcare, government, and educational organizations, among others. His 2005 presentations included:

- 🌐 Proliteracy Worldwide Annual Conference
- 🌐 Texas Library Association Annual Conference
- 🌐 American Lighting Association Annual Conference
- 🌐 Texas City Management Association Annual Conference
- 🌐 National Association of College Auxiliary Services Annual Conference
- 🌐 Florida Association of Chamber Professionals Statewide Community Leadership Annual Conference
